DETAILED ACTION

Specification

The title of the invention is not descriptive. A new title is required that is clearly indicative of the invention to which the claims are directed.

Information Disclosure Statement

An initialed and dated copy of Applicant's IDS form 1449, Paper No. 3, is attached to the instant Office Action.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

Claims 1, 3 and 27 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Atrache et al. (U.S. Pat. No. 5,415,997, see IDS).

The instant invention is drawn to a composition comprising a general enrichment media and at least one structure modifying organic chemical. The structure modifying organic chemical is being interpreted to include antibodies, which modify the compound they attach too, and which qualify as being an organic chemical by the fact that they are made up of amino acids.

Atrache et al. anticipates the instant invention (see claim 1s, 8) in that it takes a test sample and exposes it to a structure modifying organic chemical, in this case an antibody, incubating the sample in a nutrient broth in the presence of the structure modifying organic chemical followed by assaying for the microorganism. Therefore, the instant invention is anticipated by Atrache et al.

Art Unit: 1648

Claims 1-4 and 27 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Marino et al. (Journal of Bacteriology 1991, see IDS).

The recitation of the intended use recited in the preamble of the claimed method is not given patentable weight. The preamble "for exposing antigenic epitopes of a microorganism" is not given the effect of a limitation unless it breathes life and meaning into the claim. In order to limit the claim, the preamble must be "essential to point out the invention defined by the claim." Kropa v. Robie, 187 F.2d 150, 152, 88 USPQ 478, 481 (CCPA 1951). Intended use recitations and other types of functional language cannot be entirely disregarded. However, in apparatus, article, and composition claims, intended use must result in a structural difference between the claimed invention and the prior art in order to patentably distinguish the claimed invention from the prior art. If the prior art structure is capable of performing the intended use, then it meets the claim. In a claim drawn to a process of making, the intended use must result in a manipulative difference as compared to the prior art. In re Casey, 370 F.2d 576, 152 USPQ 235 (CCPA 1967); In re Otto, 312 F.2d 937, 938, 136 USPQ 458, 459 (CCPA 1963).

The instant invention is interpreted to be a composition comprising a general enrichment media and at least one structure modifying organic chemical.

Marino et al. disclose incubating microorganism in growth medium (PPBE) and 1 mM 2,4-dinitrophenol (DNP). Therefore, the instant invention is anticipated by Marino et al.

Art Unit: 1648

Claims 1-4 and 27 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Ohyama et al. (Journal of Bacteriology 1992, see IDS).

The recitation of the intended use recited in the preamble of the claimed method is not given patentable weight. The preamble "for exposing antigenic epitopes of a microorganism" is not given the effect of a limitation unless it breathes life and meaning into the claim. In order to limit the claim, the preamble must be "essential to point out the invention defined by the claim." Kropa v. Robie, 187 F.2d 150, 152, 88 USPQ 478, 481 (CCPA 1951). Intended use recitations and other types of functional language cannot be entirely disregarded. However, in apparatus, article, and composition claims, intended use must result in a structural difference between the claimed invention and the prior art in order to patentably distinguish the claimed invention from the prior art. If the prior art structure is capable of performing the intended use, then it meets the claim. In a claim drawn to a process of making, the intended use must result in a manipulative difference as compared to the prior art. In re Casey, 370 F.2d 576, 152 USPQ 235 (CCPA 1967); In re Otto, 312 F.2d 937, 938, 136 USPQ 458, 459 (CCPA 1963).

The instant invention is interpreted to be a composition comprising a general enrichment media and at least one structure modifying organic chemical.

Ohyama et al. disclose incubating microorganism in growth medium in the presence of carbonyl cyanide-m-chlorophenyl hydrazone. Therefore, the instant invention is anticipated by Ohyama et al.

Conclusion

No claims allowed.
